Services Oil Integration Machinery; Await President's OK To Boost Regulars

Army and Air Force personnel chiefs are ready to set their integration machinery into motion as soon as President Eisenhower signs the Regular Officer Augmentation bill.

The career legislation plan—granting authority for appointment of thousands of additional officers in the Regular ranks of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps—went to the White House on 16 July and was expected to be approved by the President before the week's end.

Statutory ceilings for Regular officers in the Army and Air Force are increased to permit about one-half of the officers in both Services to be Regulars. The bill contains authority for the Army and Air Force to make the additional appointments.

For the Navy and Marine Corps, the measure makes permanent the present temporary authority which the latter two Services are using to integrate officers into their Regular ranks.

The statutory ceiling for Regular Army officers is increased from 30,600 to 49,500. This represents an increase from 26 per cent to 50 per cent of the planned active-duty officer requirement of 99,000.

The Regular ceiling for the Air Force is raised from 27,500 to 69,425. This represents an increase from 17 per cent to 50 per cent of the planned active-duty AF officer requirement of 139,000.

For the Army, the bill authorizes new appointments in all Regular grades. However, no appointments will be made above the rank of colonel.

For the Air Force, the bill authorizes new appointments in all Regular grades through the rank of lieutenant colonel (although major is the highest grade in which the Air Force currently plans to

Navy Flag Board Dips Far Down List

Thirty-three new Rear Admirals were named this week by a Navy Line selection board.

Almost two-thirds of the captains (20) were selected from below the promotion zone. Six were selected from above the zone and seven from within the zone.

The group is the third largest number of officers to be selected for flag rank since WWII. Last year's board selected 39, including 25 from within the zone but none from above the zone.

This year, Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas made a special appeal to the board to "consider carefully" those officers previously passed over.

In an unusual letter to Secretary Thomas after selections had been completed, Admiral Felix B. Stump, President of the board, said "It was a matter

Cordiner Group Learns Pay Raise Need From Key Leaders

THE Cordiner Committee, moving at a fast clip, got straight-from-the-shoulder word this week from Air Force and Army field commanders on why a military pay boost is essential to check the continued heavy loss of skilled manpower.

Visiting at operational headquarters where the manpower situation is hurting readiness and effectiveness, the Cordiner Committee met successively with General Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, at SAC Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nebr.; with General Earle E. Partridge, USAF, C-in-C of the Continental Air Defense Command at Colorado Springs, Colo., and with Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Watlington, USA, CG of the German-bound 8th Infantry Division at Ft. Carson, Colo.

As the field investigation was going on, the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force were arranging to convene groups of senior NCO's who will give their views on "career attractiveness" problems to the Defense Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation. (See Page 2).

Air Force Promotes Hundreds of Regulars

The Air Force has released the names of 281 majors selected for promotion to permanent lieutenant colonel—Page 8.

Also made available this week were the names of 2249 captains chosen for promotion to permanent major. They begin on Page 20.

There are 68 new Presidential appointments in the Air Force on Page 9.

Today's Army National Guard Is More "Ready" Than Ever Visualized in Pre-WWII Days; Growth Called "Phenomenal"

By Maj. Gen. Donald W. McGowan, USA Chief, Army Div., National Guard Bureau

THE ten years since the reorganization of the Army National Guard following World War II have witnessed the development of a Ready Reserve component which is "ready" to a degree such as those of us in the National Guard prior to 1940 never visualized.

In numbers (from zero in June, 1946 to nearly 410,000 on 30 June 1956) the growth of the Army National Guard has been phenomenal. More significant, however, has been its development as a "ready reserve" in the true sense of the word, from the whole attitude of its officers and men to the adequacy of training and the superb condition of its equipment.

While this readiness has by no means reached the level we are working to achieve, it is far and away above the readiness of the National Guard that entered Federal Service in 1940-41.

THE REBUILDING of the National Guard following World War II was influenced and continues to be influenced by two commonly acknowledged factors:

- The desire to reduce the cost of a large standing Army in a protracted period of an uneasy peace.
- The reduction of the lead time to be expected between the outbreak of hostilities and the day on which National Guard or Army Reserve units must be committed to combat.

It is obvious that both of these factors dictate a far greater degree of mobilization readiness of our reserve components than has ever been achieved in the past. Toward this goal the National Guard has been working and, I am able to report, has made real progress, especially during the past twelve months.

The Army National Guard today counts 5,350 Federally recognized units, including six armored divisions and 21 infantry divisions, in its troop basis. The strength of these divisions averages 103.4 per cent of programmed strength for fiscal year 1956, with the exception of the eight divisions ordered to active duty during the Korean emergency and which are, therefore, still rebuilding their strength.

This troop basis reflects a substantial trend to armor. Four infantry divisions and a number of other major units have in the past two years been converted to armor; others have converted to artillery and engineer.

IN ANY EVALUATION of the readiness of the National Guard, the lack of active duty training of a large per cent of its enlisted men is frequently pointed out. While this condition must certainly be acknowledged, full weight should be given to other factors bearing on the readiness of the National Guard. This is not always the case.

For example: Eighty-eight per cent of the officers of the Army National Guard have served a period of active Federal duty, the great majority during World War II or in Korea. In an average year, more than 8,000 officers and enlisted men attend Army Service Schools, and 47,000 National Guardsmen are presently voluntarily enrolled in Army extension courses. Seventeen per cent of the enlisted strength have served in the active forces. Of those Guardsmen who have had no prior active service, more than half have served in the National Guard for a period in excess of 2 years.

The current reenlistment rate is 70%; discharges for ETS and other causes result in an annual turnover of 18%, to which must be added the loss to the Active Armed Forces by enlistment of 15% in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

The National Guard could not reach its present state of organization and training through training assemblies of only one night a week, supplemented by an annual 15 day field training period. Additional training is prescribed for most Guard officers and non-commissioned officers. This includes staff training which culminates in large scale command post exercises conducted by the continental armies. Weekly drills are supplemented by weekend training periods, not all of which are paid drills. Necessarily, Guard officers and non-commissioned officers are required to do a great deal of out-of-armory work and study in preparation for duty as instructors at weekly training sessions.

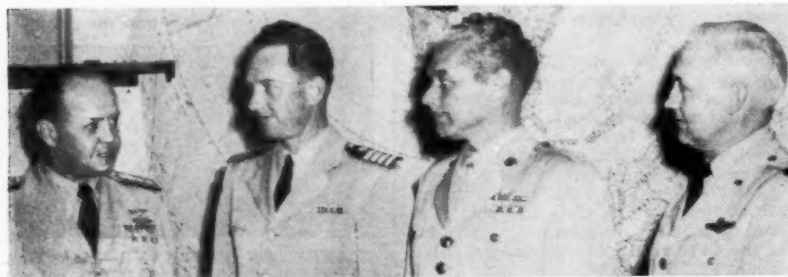

IN THE AREA which presently gives the most concern—the lack of active duty basic training of half of our young Guardsmen, we have made real progress; not, by a long shot, the headway we are striving for, but it is substantial. In the past year, nearly 5,000 National Guard recruits volunteered for eight weeks of basic training with the Active Army, and the total of Guard volunteers who have performed six months of Active Army training under the provisions of RFA 55 is approaching 4,000. There is presently being conducted in every state intensive campaigns to enroll more substantial numbers of volunteers for the six months training, by personal solicitation of every eligible youngster.

The National Guard could not reach this milestone of a state of relatively satisfactory readiness solely by its own efforts. Rather it has come so far because of the effective support of the Active Army at every level. The Army has assigned, with few exceptions, highly capable and experienced unit advisors. Field training support, a tremendous undertaking for the Armies each year, has been increasingly effective.

The equipment in the hands of the National Guard is fully adequate for training, and is superbly maintained by its own personnel.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Six members of the U. S. Naval War College, Pacific Group on Summer tour visited the Continental Air Defense Command recently, where RADM. Hugh H. AF Assn. Will Honor Guard-Reserve Units

The Air Force Association has designated an Iowa Air National Guard fighter squadron and a Wilmington, Ohio, Air Force Reserve troop carrier wing as the most outstanding Guard and Reserve units in the United States to receive Association awards during the tenth annual convention in New Orleans next month.

Gill Robb Wilson of New York, Association president, said the 174th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron of Sioux City, had been selected as the most outstanding Guard unit for the period 1 July, 1955, to 30 June, 1956, and the 302d Troop Carrier Wing of Clinton County AB, Wilmington, Ohio, as the most outstanding Air Reserve unit.

Mr. Wilson also announced that M/Sgt. David L. Cochran of the 124th Air Defense Group at Boise, Idaho, had been selected as the most outstanding Air National Guard airman in the United States and M/Sgt. Doyle A. Webb of the 9805th Air Reserve Squadron at Longview, Tex., had been chosen the most outstanding Air Reserve airman in the country.

The units and individuals will receive their awards at a dinner in the Jung Hotel, New Orleans, on 1 Aug., opening day of the Association's tenth annual convention. The convention will end Sunday, 5 Aug.

The Reserve unit and airman, Mr. Wilson said, were selected by Continental Air Command at Mitchel Air Force Base in Long Island. The Air Force Division of the National Guard Bureau in the Pentagon picked the Guard unit and airman.

The Sioux City Air Guard squadron is commanded by Maj. Donald W. Forney. The 302d Air Reserve Troop Carrier Wing is commanded by Col. B. J. Campbell.

Gen. Powers Elected

Maj. Gen. Edward M. Powers, USAF, Ret., has been elected a member of the Board of Directors of Flight Refueling, Inc., Baltimore, Md. He was formerly vice president of the Curtiss Wright Corporation, Woodridge, N. J., and is presently a member of the consultant firm, Powers and Mulligan, Montclair, N. J.

THE ARMY TECHNICIAN PROGRAM of the National Guard provides a skilled force of full time training, administration, supply and maintenance personnel on which the day to day operation and high level of competence of the National Guard depends.

The units of the National Guard travel hundreds of miles from home stations to Field Training sites as a matter of routine. Its aim is to be fully self-sustaining in its training and operation, asking only of the Army that it provide "Rations, Gasoline and Ammunition."

Attendance at Field Training reaches 95%, and weekly training assemblies average 89%, a clear indication that within its strength of 410,000, there is no dead wood on the rolls of the National Guard.

To close out this piece, I would like to paraphrase the slogan of one of the country's largest industrial firms and apply it to the thinking that prevails throughout the Army National Guard, "Training is our most important product."

Capt. Samuel W. Kime, MC, USA, 8320 Roanoke Avenue, Takoma Park, Md., has been named Acting Curator of the Medical Museum by Capt. William M. Silliphant, MC, USN, the Director, Armed Forces Institute of Pathology.

Maj. Gen. William D. Eckert, USAF, has taken over duties as Deputy Commander of the Tactical Air Command at Langley, AFB, Va., under General O. P. Weyland, USAF.

Services Face Major Manpower Cuts With Army Seen Certain To Lose Most

The Pentagon wheels were grinding this week toward a major cut in military manpower, likely to be initiated in the fiscal '58 budget now in preliminary preparation and to be continued for several years after that.

Pentagon observers are aware, however, that manpower reductions normally are not spread out over an extended period of time. Once a decision is made to reduce the size of forces, the cuts are usually made over a relatively short period of time.

There was little doubt that the Army would take the heaviest blow in any forthcoming reduction, though the Air Force almost likely would lose considerably in comparison to presently projected goals.

This is because the Air Force, though budgeted for a strength of 975,000, now has about 910,000.

It is apparent that there is strong pressure for a reduction in manpower, with a consequent realignment of forces from overseas—particularly in NATO—with a possible ultimate reduction from about 2,850,000 to a strength of roughly 2,000,000.

This was first reported in the New York Times of Friday, 13 July in a story by Anthony Leveiro. The article said that the cut, proposed by Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, JCS Chairman, had resulted in "a revolt by the chiefs of the three armed forces."

The story received nation-wide attention and prompted a response from Admiral Radford, which is published on the next page.

By the end of this week, there was little doubt that a cut in manpower was in the making; the question was how much of a cut it would be, and how fast it would be made.

Pay Raise Group Will Get The Word From NCO'S In All The Services

THE Defense Department's pay raise inquiry is going to be bolstered by authoritative reports from senior NCO's in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps on what motivates enlisted men to continue or quit military service.

The Advisory Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation, headed by President Ralph J. Cordiner of the General Electric Company, has asked the Service Secretaries to convene a symposium of top three-grade representatives.

Their job: "to set down what they consider to be the 'facts of life' . . . that either make a man want to stay in or get out, and then to make recommendations for either administrative or legislative actions to strengthen the favorable aspects and correct any shortcomings."

The Cordiner Committee wants no long delay in this project. A deadline of 30 August has been set.

Admiral Radford Says Cuts Are Possible, Reports "Honest Differences" No Surprise

ANNUALLY at about this time of year the Joint Chiefs of Staff are required to make studies which attempt to forecast the military force structure necessary for the security of the United States in the foreseeable future.

"This has always been a difficult and unenviable task, but it is particularly difficult at the present time due to the many important and more or less intangible factors which must be considered. The impact of revolutionary future changes in weapons and weapons systems is difficult to appraise and there can be honest differences of opinion in regard to this matter over a wide range.

"Assumptions on many factors other than military also must be considered in such planning studies and in these categories, too, there can be wide divergences of opinion.

"In all such planning studies the Joint Chiefs of Staff necessarily call on members of their personal staffs for assistance. There is no doubt that the story published this morning was based on partial information obtained from an individual or individuals who had assisted in the staff work of this summer's planning and who had only a limited knowledge of the overall planning problem. As is usual in leaks of this kind, there is a mixture of fact and pure speculation.

"THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF have not been relieved of the annual requirement to advise on the pattern of military forces in the foreseeable future and their studies will continue until they are able to present their best advice to the Secretary of Defense. This may or may not be a unanimous recommendation.

"The individual who attributes certain definite views to the Chairman is anticipating conclusions which the Chairman himself has not yet reached.

"There are three points which must be made at this time. First, it is possible that manpower requirements for the future security of the United States can ultimately be lower because of the introduction of new weapons.

"Second, it is a fact that the United States has military obligations in connection with the security of the Free World which it will not unilaterally change.

"FINALLY, IT SHOULD BE REMEMBERED that the planning effort of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is always the first step in a complicated chain of national planning—planning which ultimately has to go to the highest level in the Executive Branch and later to the Congress."

MILLIONS IN NEW BENEFITS DUE FAMILIES

New medical and survivor benefits are slated for military men and their families beginning in December and January.

The House and Senate completed work this week on the $690 million Survivor Benefits bill and sent the measure to the White House for the President's signature. This law will become effective on 1 January 1957.

At the Pentagon work continued on details of the Family Medical Care insurance program—for which $76 million has been appropriated and which goes into effect the first week in December.

The two programs are the major career items in the 1956 Defense Department legislative package.

The Survivor Benefits law will place all of the 2,850,000 men and women in the Armed Forces under contributory Social Security, and will provide increased benefits for 185,000 widows, children and parents. It also eliminates the $10,000 free life insurance.

THE JOURNAL will publish another detailed analysis of the new Survivor Benefits plan following approval at the White House.

Military Construction Program Faces New Action After Presidential Veto

Congressional leaders moved quickly this week to overcome President Eisenhower's veto of the $2.1 billion Military Public Works Bill.

The legislation includes a $230 million family housing program for troops both in the U.S. and overseas.

The President refused to sign the measure because of provisions which required the Pentagon to come into agreement with the House and Senate Armed Services Committees on all military family housing projects and on Air Force utilization of the TALOS guided missile.

He said these requirements are an invasion of the Constitutional powers of the Executive Branch of Government and would require the Secretary of Defense to share his responsibilities with Congressional committees.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee wasted no time in introducing a new Military Public Works measure from which the objectionable provisions had been deleted. The bill was approved by the House and sent to the Senate on 17 July.

The Senate Armed Services Committee was expected to act on the measure as The Journal went to press.

Funds for the big building program (the vetoed bill provides authority only) were still being put through the legislative mill.

House and Senate conferees were busy working out a final compromise money bill for the military construction program. The House approved $1.4 billion for the program and the Senate approved $1.5 billion. The compromise figure is expected to be nearer the Senate total.

WAR COLLEGE INSIGNIA—Newest addition to the Army's shoulder insignia family is the black and gold "patch" of the Army War College. Members of the staff, faculty and student body of the College will wear the new insignia after 1 Aug. The insignia is a black Norman shield with three gold stars in an arc above a golden flaming torch. The three stars were taken from the coat of arms of the College, which is the Army's senior educational institution; the stars represent the major combat arms of the Infantry, Armor, and Artillery. The torch is the torch of learning which symbolizes the purpose and mission of the College.

Navy Pilot Shortage Looms; Percentage Of Aviation Officers Climbs To New High

The Navy faces a shortage of 2,200 pilots during the current fiscal year.

Capt. David L. Martineau, USN, Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel for Special Projects, told the Symington Airpower Subcommittee that the ratio of aviation officers has increased in the Navy from 40 to 48 percent, but continuing emphasis on the Navy's air arm will bring about an 11 percent shortage of pilots during fiscal '57.

"While the number of pilots on board continues to increase," Captain Martineau said, "the pilot requirements have been increasing faster."

He told the Senators the current increase in requirements "has been due largely to the assignments given the Navy in continental air defense."

The Navy is taking steps, however, to offset the pilot shortage wherever possible by the use of nonpilots who are qualified in certain air specialties. Nonpilots who are qualified in electronics and maintenance, for instance, are assigned supervisory jobs in those fields, Captain Martineau said.

With the increasing emphasis on Naval air, Captain Martineau said, the ratio of aviation officers has increased from 40 percent to 48 percent since 1954. The ratio of other line officers has dropped from 60 percent to 52 percent.

The Assistant Chief of Naval Personnel told the subcommittee that 33 percent of the Navy's 397,000 officers and men in the operating forces and 45 percent of the 281,000 officers and men in the supporting forces "are exclusively engaged in aviation duties."

Select Naval Reserve Lieuts.

A Navy selection board has named 2,482 Naval Reserve lieutenants (jg), of the staff corps for promotion to the next higher grade.

Of those recommended for promotion, three are women officers of the Supply Corps, one woman officer of the Medical Corps and 218 in the Nurse Corps. Male officers include: Medical Service Corps, 41; Chaplain Corps, 61; Civil Engineer Corps, 226; Dental Corps, 300; Supply Corps, 828 and in the Medical Corps, 804.

Aide To Asst. Sec. Nav.

Capt. Richard L. Fowler, USN, now assigned to the Office of Naval Operations, has been ordered as Aide to the new Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, Garrison Norton.

During the new fiscal year which began this month, the Navy and Marine Corps will have an average of 22,500 pilots, he said, and will operate and support some 10,000 aircraft.

Captain Martineau also noted that the Navy's Ready Air Reserve has some 40,000 members, including 7,500 Reserve pilots, and the Marine Air Reserve numbers 21,000 with 1,800 pilots. The air reserve is "organized and trained," he said, "so that the various reserve air squadrons can join the fleet operating forces as operating units ready to go."

Left: G-E 5-Star subminiature tubes on life test are checked for resistance to inter-element leakage. Minimum resistance requirement on critical types after 500 hours is 50,000,000 ohms. Above: how mica slots of original G-E design greatly lengthen plate-to-grid leakage paths. Arrow points to one of four curved barrier slots in the tube mica spacers. These prevent leakage currents from flowing over the shortest path between the plate support (vertical black line) and grid support (circle). Instead, leakage (dotted lines) must follow long paths around the ends of the slot, where higher resistance is met.

Slotted micas in G-E 5-Star subminiatures combat inter-element leakage; increase tube reliability!

WHERE it is important to ward off plate-to-grid leakage—as in certain of the twin triodes—G-E 5-Star subminiatures have slotted mica spacers of original design that act as efficient safeguards. These slots lengthen the paths that leakage currents must take through deposits of any conductive substances on the micas. Resistance is greatly increased.

Tube electrical leakage can seriously impair the dependability of military electronic equipment. Noisy, unclear signal reception erroneous instrument readings these and other faults may develop. The new anti-leakage slots designed into G-E 5-Star subminiature micas bring added trustworthiness to critical tube sockets—an important "plus" for those who operate and maintain field and airborne equipment.

Anti-leakage slots are only one of many special design features that join to give G-E 5-Star subminiatures top reliability and long life—the prime objectives of General Electric's 5-Star program. To special tube design, add high-precision manufacture under dust-free, lint-free conditions, and rigid and extensive tube testing.

Where dependability is vital, specify G-E 5-Star Tubes! Ask for them in new military equipment install them as replacements! General Electric Co., Tube Department, Schenectady 5, N. Y.

Maj. Gen. Mark E. Bradley, Jr., USAF, former Vice Commander in Chief, U. S. Air Forces Europe, has reported at the Pentagon in Washington, D. C., to assume his new duties as Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff, Materiel.

General Bradley was succeeded at Wiesbaden by Maj. Gen. Herbert Thatcher, USAF, formerly deputy chief of staff for development.

General Bradley had been in Europe since 1953, first as deputy chief of staff for materiel and from August of that year as Deputy C in C to Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner, USAF.

General Bradley was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1930, having previously attended Clemson A. & M. College in South Carolina. He was graduated from the Advanced Flying School in 1931 and from the Air Corps Engineering School in 1938. He served as a fighter pilot from 1931 to 1947 including two years as a flight test pilot, Air Materiel Command.

Col. Godman Is CO

Col. Henry C. Godman, USAF, has been named to command Lincoln AFB, Nebr., in August. He was assigned to Lincoln in November 1954 as Director of Materiel, 98th Bomb Wing.

The Colonel and Mrs. Godman, the former Virginia Russell, Dallas, Texas, reside with their son, Henry Wyatt, age one, at 2766 South 33d Street, in Lincoln.

Col. Peterson Takes Over At Palm Beach Base

Col. George W. Peterson, USAF, has assumed command of Palm Beach AFB, Fla., succeeding Col. H. G. Thorne, Jr., USAF, reassigned to Headquarters MATS.

Palm Beach, a key MATS installation, is the primary heavy air transport and amphibious transitional training base for the Air Force.

Colonel Thorne came to Palm Beach in 1953 after serving at Headquarters USAF. He graduated from the Air War College in 1949 and the National War College in 1952.

Colonel Peterson comes to Palm Beach after serving as Commander of Kindley AFB, Bermuda. He has almost 13,000 hours' pilot time.

Mrs. Peterson is the former Miss Gladys White. They have four sons, 2d Lt. George W. Peterson, USAF; Ronald W., David L., and Alan M. Peterson.

TAC Gets Squadron From Alaskan Command

Transfer of the 54th Troop Carrier Squadron (H) from the Alaskan Air Command to the Tactical Air Command for assignment to the 18th Air Force's 63d Troop Carrier Wing at Donaldson AFB, S. C., is reported by TAC Headquarters at Langley AFB, Va.

The 54th Squadron, which is equipped with the four-engine C-124 Globemaster transports, has been stationed at Elmendorf AFB, at Anchorage, Alaska, almost continuously since 1942.

The transfer, already in progress, will be completed by mid-August. The advance element of the squadron is now in place at Donaldson.

Airlift missions in the Alaskan theater formerly performed by the 54th Squadron will be taken over by the 18th Air Force which regularly conducts extensive operations throughout the Arctic. The mission of the squadron has been to provide heavy airlift support for the Alaskan Theatre. In the performance of this mission, the squadron has airlifted all types of heavy equipment, trucks, radar vans, refueling units, and personnel. The squadron has participated extensively in airlift operations in support of the construction of the Dew Line, the radar early warning system on the Arctic Circle.

The squadron is commanded by Lt. Col. Joseph L. Harris, USAF.

Col. Condron Heads Recruit Advertising

Col. John E. Condron, USAF, has reported to the 3500th USAF Recruiting Wing, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio as Director of Wing Advertising and Publicity under Brig. Gen. Arno H. Luehman, USAF. He succeeds Maj. David B. O'Hara, USAF, who will remain as Deputy Director.

Prior to this assignment, Colonel Condron served as Special Assistant to the Deputy Chief of Staff for Development, Hq. USAF from November 1953.

What is Strength? The most heartening aspect of the last week end's published-but-denied reports of impending drastic cuts in personnel strength was the strong public reaction. Both Democratic and Republican members of Congress and editorial writers of the nation's press showed strong distaste for a planned reduction of any such magnitude as the 800,000 cut said to have been proposed over the next four years.

The original report stated that the three heads of the military services, General Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, and General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, were in "revolt" against an effort by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, to "impose a concept involving a cut of the Armed Forces of approximately 800,000 men by 1960 and withdrawal of the bulk of the United States forces overseas." (Specific mention was not made of the fourth member of the JCS, General Randolph McC. Pate, Commandant of the Marine Corps, but it could be assumed that he would have been involved in any such dispute). The Washington dispatch further stated that the Joint Chiefs had planned to visit President Eisenhower at Gettysburg about the matter, but that "high Defense Department officials" intervened to have the visit cancelled and further action postponed until after Election Day.

Admiral Radford reacted promptly, issuing a statement saying that the "leak" was a "mixture of fact and pure speculation." He said the story in attributing "certain definite views to me as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is anticipating conclusions which I have not yet reached." (See page 3)

Admiral Radford's apparent disavowal of the specific figure of the 800,000-man cut in four years was welcome news to the Congress and the people who, we are sure, would not stand for any such drastic reduction in our manpower.

However, one cannot escape the conclusion that cuts are in the wind and that while not as great as the first forecast they still will be greater than might have been expected from earlier official statements. In fact, Admiral Radford's denial of the article also made the point that "it is possible that manpower requirements for the future security of the United States can ultimately be lowered because of the introduction of new weapons."

Whatever cuts are made doubtless will be justified to the American people as not reducing our military strength but merely as manpower reductions made possible by the technology of modern weapons. The question, then, to be decided is how far can manpower really be cut without weakening our military power. No one denies that the atom or hydrogen bomb delivered by a single bomber and a crew of five can bring about more destruction than thousands of pre-war aircraft or X number of divisions. But it would be absurd to base our power on that alone. We must still have tactical aviation, our present 14 combat ready Army divisions out of total of 19 cannot with safety be further reduced, while current reports are revealing how fast the Soviet Navy is approaching our own strength at sea.

There is danger in placing all our defense eggs in the basket of technology. Admiral Radford's denial that he had taken a firm stand for the suggested 1/3 manpower cut is heartening. We hope budgetary developments will not force compromises with security.

Rights of the Executive. President Eisenhower's action in vetoing the military construction authorization bill because of two objectionable provisions was proper and justified. The Commander in Chief resented the provision requiring the Secretary of Defense to "come into agreement" with the two Armed Services Committees before spending any money for Talos missile sites for the Air Force and also the section forbidding the Department to contract for family housing construction without getting the specific consent of the Senate and House committees in each instance.

These provisions, the President said, "violate the fundamental constitutional principle of separation of powers prescribed in Articles I and II of the Constitution, which place the legislative power in the Congress and the executive power in the Executive Branch."

It is obvious that if the President consented to these provisions by signing the Act it could lead to further and further encroachments by the Congress upon the prerogatives of the President and his Executive Departments. It is conceivable that the time might come when the Department of Defense could not act in any major way without first getting the consent of the Congressional Committees.

The Armed Services Committees are composed of well qualified Senators and Representatives who have excellent records for keeping the interests of National Defense above politics. They feel strongly the responsibility placed upon them by the Constitution to "Raise and Support Armies." But to "Raise and Support" does not mean to operate and that is what the provisions in question would permit them to do.

The measure is a most important one and we hope it will be reenacted promptly without the objectionable features cited by the President.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—The Paymasters and Quartermasters Departments of the Marine Corps have been consolidated to form a single new agency to be known as the "Supply Department of the United States Marine Corps" with the "Quartermaster General of the Marine Corps" as its head.

50 Years Ago—Now that Captain Dreyfus has been reinstated in the Army of France and promoted to the grade of major, it is worth recalling that the monstrous conspiracy which blighted his career reacted with vengeful force upon the rogues who planned it. Dreyfus is to be enrolled in the Legion of Honor, and not only France, but the whole world applauds the final decision.

90 Years Ago—In a recent conversation with an officer of the Regular Army, who is also celebrated as a tactician, that gentleman expressed it as his opinion, that the National Guard would make much greater progress if there were some few model companies among the organizations composing it. Our opinion on this subject, therefore, received the sanction of this high authority, for this was exactly what we had in view when we proposed "competitive drills."

Pay And Retirement

Editor, THE JOURNAL:
This is intended to be An Open Letter to Congress.

At long last, the Powers That Be in Washington are beginning to realize the necessity for more liberal treatment of our Armed Forces if we are to attract the type of personnel we must have to keep our country free.

Every Officer of the Line is a combat officer; and they must be experts in the complicated art of war in this day of mechanized warfare if our country is to survive the next holocaust. They must not be relegated to a position of inferiority either in the matter of pay, rank or political importance. I do not mean to say that doctors and dentists in the armed services are over-paid. Far from it. But I do say most emphatically, that any Officers of the Line having equal rank and length of service with them, and who receive less pay than they, are grossly under-estimated and under-paid.

One of the most important factors considered by intelligent men when trying to decide whether to choose a military career, is the financial security it offers after they become incapacitated for active service on account of old age or because of physical disabilities incurred in performance of duty. Formerly, that security was provided by a guaranteed 75 per cent of the active duty pay of the grade in which the individual was retired. However, Congress changed that law because of its abuse by a few officers and Medical Examining Boards in cases where it was questionable whether the disability of the individual was incurred "in line of duty." But in curing that situation, Congress, in 1949, placed the financial welfare of retired officers largely in the hands of Examining Boards whose standards are as varied as the personnel of which they are composed.

Some are overly lenient; some are drastically strict; some err in judgment as to the degree of disability awarded; and some, in rarer instances, are prejudiced in favor of or against the officer examined. Therefore, the degrees of disability awarded by these boards—and which vitally affect the retired pay of many officers, often vary to such an extent that they must resort to the prescribed alternative method of computing their pay under the new law. That is, by multiplying their number of years of active service by two and one-half. This fixes the per cent of the active duty pay of their respective grades, to which they are entitled; and for all of them who have served less than 30 years on the active list, the result is less—sometimes much less—than the 75 per cent which was guaranteed to some of the older officers when they elected to choose a military career.

In this day of ever-decreasing purchasing power of fixed salaries, the least that should be done for these retired officers, is to permit them to multiply their number of years of active service by three instead of the prevailing two and one-half, provided; that in no case, shall any officer on the retired list receive more than 75 per cent of the active duty base pay of the grade in which he is retired except as, by law, otherwise provided. Thus, all retired officers who are forced to compute their pay in this manner, and who have served less than 25 years on the active list, would receive less than 75 per cent of the active base pay of their respective grades—each according to his length of active service.

Certainly, all officers retired on account of physical disability incurred in line of duty, should, regardless of the original degree of disability, receive the full 75 per cent of active duty pay when his disability becomes such that he is unable to engage in gainful occupation. And this should apply also to those who become unemployable on account of old age—say 64 years, the former age of compulsory retirement.

Airlift for Army Seen "Totally and Completely Inadequate"; Present Facilities Could Not Move One Full "Division Force," Congress Is Told; Source of Lift Another Problem

THE outlook for airlift, the means by which our small Army hopes to make itself more effective and more powerful, is being characterized as "totally and completely inadequate."

After hearing Army leaders describe the present airlift situation, Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo) commented that "We are carefully planning to stay behind."

Yet each Army Chief of Staff since World War II has emphasized the desirability of giving every Army division the capability of air mobility. Today, it is generally conceded that the most that could be moved by air is the combat echelon of one division with a minimum of technical service troops and with no accompanying supplies.

Such a stripped down division would mean the airlifting of 5,000 tons. But to move a "division force" with combat and service elements and an initial level of accompanying supplies (about six days) would require a lift of 11,000 tons.

Yet no plans have even been worked out for the movement of such an 11,000-ton division force. A joint Army and Air Force study is underway but no conclusions have been reached.

Contrasted with this, Army leaders told the Symington Air Power subcommittee that the very minimum the Army should have is the capability of lifting one division in each of its major theaters of interest plus one in the United States.

THIS SORRY OUTLOOK for Army airlift is not confined to the views of the Army alone. During earlier hearings on the Tactical Air command its commander, General O. P. Weyland, USAF, characterized the present capability as "marginal." As to the future, he pointed out that "as we are going more and more into moving our units overseas, it is becoming increasingly marginal."

Furthermore, TAC generals told the committee that as current types of transports are phased out and succeeded by newer aircraft, the numbers of planes available for airlift will decrease although, because of the greater capacity of the prospective planes, the tonnage and troops for which airlift will be available will remain about the same.

DEFENSE SECRETARY CHARLES E. WILSON offered a glimmer of hope by telling the Committee that the problem is currently being restudied, but it seemed apparent from his approach that he is not overly sympathetic to the Army's needs.

"We have a very substantial airlift now," the Secretary said. "We are improving it very rapidly. At the same time, it is one of the controversial subjects that we are studying all the time. And that is one of our current problems for discussion, and if, after we analyze the matter very carefully, we decide that our plans are not big enough, we will make them bigger; if we decide we are all right, we will stick to them in our recommendations this Fall."

"There are many facets to this particular problem," he continued, "including some assumptions on why you need the airlift and where it is going to be lifted to and what are the circumstances with relation to the whole problem."

Under present conditions there seems to be considerable uncertainty as to just what would be available to the Army for airlift. The Army's requirements are in direct conflict with the requirements of the Air Force and the Navy. SAC, for example, would have great need for airlift in the initial phase of any emergency. As Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, USA, Army R&D Chief, told the Committee:

"SAC MUST HAVE ITS AIRLIFT. It must be ever ready at all times. I feel very strongly about that. If this implies a serious shortage in lift for the Army this is what it is, but I believe SAC must be ready to go."

Even including all of the Civil Reserve Airfleet with the military transport aircraft there would still not be enough to do the job.

Maj. Gen. Earle J. Wheeler, USA, Director of Plans in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Military Operations, told the Committee that studies had been made of this combined airlift capability projected into 1957.

"It was found," he said, "that the combined capability would not be adequate to meet the requirements of all the Services during the first 30 days of a general war."

General Wheeler summarized the sad outlook with the succinct statement that "the problems are clear although the solutions are not so readily apparent." He added that "I am sure we all agree that our National Security and commitments require early solution to these problems."

WHO SUPPLIES STRATEGIC AIRLIFT to the Army was also a question which the Committee had some difficulty understanding. TAC, of course, always supplies the tactical airlift for units to be parachuted into combat areas, but in the strategic airlift both TAC and MATS are involved and even SAC has been suggested.

In discussing the availability of transport planes, General Weyland, TAC commander, reported to the Committee that "MATS also have aircraft of that type, and that in many ways it is really their basic responsibility in these inter-theater airlifts. We assist them or they assist us, however you want to look at it."

As to tactical airlift, General Wheeler estimated that the Air Force has only 84 percent of the number of Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcars the Army really needs.

The confused situation as to strategic airlift was pointed up by General Wheeler who said that the Army operates on a "request basis."

"The Strategic Air Command as I understand it," he said, "has first priority on a major portion of transport aircraft of the Tactical Air Command."

"TAC OF COURSE NEEDS A LIFT of its own in an emergency, not only that, there would be Navy demands on MATS in an emergency, and there would be Army demands on MATS in an emergency."

(TAC's own requirements for airlift will be vastly increased as that component goes on a rotational basis overseas.)

Senator Symington said that "the number MATS has altogether is considerably less than half of what you would need to lift a single division."

THE OVERALL ARMY NEED for airlift was emphasized by General Gavin who said:

"To put troops into an operational area and deny the mobility is much the same as putting a policeman on a street corner but tying him to a fireplug."

"If he cannot go anywhere he really can't do anything except shoot the weapons in his hands at the range of those. He must be able to move. The evident lack of mobility on his part invites aggression at once because it is realized he cannot move to the scene of trouble."

"So mobility is the very essence in this day and age of getting about. Furthermore, and this applies to all theaters, mobility just about multiplies what you have."

"You multiply what you have by mobility and the product of these gives you your effectiveness at any area around the periphery."

"So mobility compares with firepower. And while we talk so much about firepower such as atomics, mobility is very much part of the equation in our favor. We have got to have good mobility if we are going to use these weapons we have."

THE SHORTAGE WAS AGGRAVATED in planning when the "New Look" reduced the Air Force's plans from 143 to 137 wings, for that reduction was made at the expense of troop carrier wings. To remedy the situation would require either the allotment of more troop carrier wings at the expense of fighter or bomber wings, which we cannot do in the present world situation, or to expand the Air Force program to get more troop carrier wings for TAC or more transport aircraft for MATS. The other course would be to permit the Army itself to build up its own force of troop carriers—but there is little likelihood of that.

In the meantime, studies and the shortage continue. The problem will remain large even if the Army is further reduced; in fact with a smaller Army mobility will even grow in importance.

While budgetary objections will loom large in the consideration of the Army's airlift needs, it should be remembered that transport aircraft cost considerably less than the complicated and high performance fighter and bombing aircraft. Furthermore, transport aircraft are useful over a much longer period of years than are combat planes, for they are not outmoded so quickly and are still useful for their designed purposes long after better models are designed and produced.

OBSELETE TERM

The Journal's survey of Army Aviation progress and problems, begun with a report last week and continued herewith, will be developed further in the issue of 28 July in an article by Col. R. R. Williams, USA. He heads Continental Army Command Board No. 6 at Ft. Rucker, Ala., the Army's Aviation Center.

Colonel Williams will tell why the Army considers that "the term Ground Forces is obsolete." He contends that the Army "is not a ground bound force," and tells the role of the Test Board in furthering Army Aviation.

Variety Of Missions Seen For Copter Drone

A remotely controlled helicopter, designed to perform a variety of military missions, has been developed jointly by the Army, Navy and Kaman Aircraft Corp., Bloomfield, Conn.

Among the missions seen for this type of craft are battlefield surveillance, where a flying TV camera and transmitter directed from behind the front lines could give combat commanders a running view of action on the front lines and movement behind enemy positions.

NINTH CLUSTER—Capt. Robert C. Adams, USA, receives the ninth Oak Leaf Cluster to his Air Medal, from Maj. Gen. E. B. Sebroe, USA, Continental Army Command CofS at Fort Monroe, Va. Col. L. H. Walker, Jr., USA, read the citation. Captain Adams earned the decoration for landing his Bell H-13 helicopter on the wing of a crashed Navy Neptune seaplane, rescuing the first two of eight passengers from the remote, waist-high waters of the Orinoco River Delta, Venezuela, last February. The Navy aircraft had started on a rescue mission of its own—to search for a lost airplane from Admiral Byrd's "Operation Deepfreeze."

Maj. Bauer Heads New Copter Co. At Ft. Riley

Maj. Keith Bauer, USA, operations and training officer in the 71st Helicopter Battalion and the Army Aviation Unit Training Command since October, 1954, has been named commanding officer of the newly activated 33d Transportation Helicopter Company at Marshall Field, Ft. Riley, Kans.

M/Sgt. Homer R. Bass has been selected by Major Bauer as first sergeant of the outfit.

1st Lt. Walter C. Lorenz, USA, a young pilot who completed his pilot training at Fort Rucker, Ala., in January, has been named Commander of the 33d's supporting unit the 573d Helicopter Field Maintenance Detachment.

Corps Aviation Officer

Appointment of Lt. Col. James H. Lee, USA, as Aviation Officer of the XVIII Airborne Corps is announced at Ft. Bragg, N. C. He replaces Maj. Morris G. Rawlings, USA, who has become the Commanding Officer of Simmons Army Air Field at Ft. Bragg.

Col. Luckett To Rucker

Col. James S. Luckett, USA, Northern Area Command deputy commander, at Frankfurt, Germany, has departed with his wife, Rilla, for Camp Rucker, Ala.

He has been succeeded as NACOM deputy commander by Col. Ralph N. Woods, USA, former CO of Frankfurt Subarea.

INTERNATIONAL HARMONY IS FOSTERED

Col. George S. Howard, USAF, Chief of Bands and Music, WO Fred Kepner and S/Sgt. Robert Cray were honored 9 July in a ceremony at the Department of State.

In the presence of the Ambassador from Cambodia, His Excellency Nong Kimmy, Jameson Parker, Special Assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, presented scrolls testifying to the award of the Order of Monsaraphon to the three by their Majesties the King and Queen of Cambodia. The scrolls were forwarded by the Cambodian Government through the American Embassy in Phnom Penh for presentation. M/Sgt. Michael Mudre accepted the scroll on behalf of Sergeant Cray who was unable to be present at the ceremony.

The awards were originally conferred on 9 May 1956 in Cambodia, when the Air Force Band played a concert under the patronage of the King and Queen. During the concert two compositions "Cambodian Suite" and "Sakrava" written by Their Majesties' son, Prince Sihanouk, were performed for the first time.

Colonel Howard was made a Commander of the Order of Monsaraphon while Warrant Officer Kepner and Sergeant Cray, who had arranged Prince Sihanouk's compositions, were made Knights of the same order.

HOUSE ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEE members were not pleased over the President's veto of the military construction authorization bill. The legislators were confident they had acted in the best interests of National Defense and with no intention of weakening the Chief Executive's responsibility for operating the Armed Forces. THE POINT IS MADE by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) and his associates that the Senate had killed the $16 million Air Force Talos guided missile project. The House was able to restore the program. ON THE HOUSING FRONT, the Committee thought that consultation with the Pentagon might eliminate difficulties that have been encountered in recent construction efforts. BUT THE ADMINISTRATION, aware of the necessity of compromise on Capitol Hill, still felt that a fundamental issue had been raised; hence the late-session veto.

A HOPEFUL INDICATION that Congress will react favorably to pay raise legislation next year comes in a quick look at this year's record, punctuated with three outstanding actions designed to enhance career attractiveness. These were passage of the Family Medical Care, Regular Officer Augmentation and Survivor Benefits Bills. IN PAST YEARS, such legislation was rejected. But with the Armed Services Committees and the other members of the Senate and House strongly convinced of the need to keep top notch men in uniform, the bills were pushed through. THERE'S NOT MUCH QUESTION that if the next Administration does not propose a solid military pay raise bill that influential members of Congress will present their own pay legislation.

THE NAVY HAS FIRED A SPECIAL DISPATCH from the CNO calling attention to the fact that there have been some recent cases in which "highly important messages" were not delivered. It was pointed out that "when such failures occur the Navy's reputation for doing the job better than anyone else is jeopardized." WITH LARGE NUMBERS of communications personnel being new and inexperienced, the Navy emphasized the need for command supervision and indoctrination in recognizing and delivering promptly and reliably all important messages.

FORMER PRESIDENT TRUMAN has a special interest in President Eisenhower's nomination of Maj. Gen. John F. Uncles, USA, to be a lieutenant general as a corps commander in Germany. During WWI, General Uncles was an enlisted man in Captain Truman's Battery D.

PERSONNEL CHIEFS ARE HOPEFUL—though not overly optimistic—that they will be given sufficient lead time to prevent force-out hardships of military manpower by the thousands. One favorable factor in the situation is the new Rehabilitation Pay Law, which provides special compensation for Reservists who have more than 5 years service and who are put off active duty involuntarily. THE REHAB PAY COST, originally estimated at about $12 million for this FY, will go higher if personnel cuts are ordered. Pentagon budget veterans anticipate that any firm decisions will be delayed until after the elections. They note that final manpower levels, in an election year or not, usually are set in the period between Thanksgiving and the transmittal of the mammoth budget volume to the Government Printing Office just before Christmas.

GEN. GRUENTHER'S RETIREMENT date still has not been set officially; it has been stated only that he will leave active service late in the year. Some are guessing the end of November. PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S NOMINATION of the NATO commander for four-star rank on the retired list was necessary because of the fact he will end his career while Congress is out of session. Unless the President had acted, General Gruenther would have been retired in his permanent rank—major general.

WIDESPREAD REPORTS of prospective cuts in U.S. manpower resources allocated to NATO may prompt some outspoken remarks by General Gruenther before he retires as SACEUR. He has cautioned repeatedly against letting down our guard too soon in Europe. IN THIS CONNECTION, Army Sec'y. Brucker, dedicating the Normandy American Cemetery and Memorial at St. Laurent-Sur-Mer, France, on 19 July, emphasized that "we must continue to keep up our guard for the long years ahead until the communists are ready to furnish adequate guarantees of lasting peace." COUNTERING PROPOSALS for major cuts in soldier strength—they can only be made by reducing our NATO commitment—the Army is certain to quote a remark by President Eisenhower. "The hand of the aggressor," he said, "is stayed by strength—and strength alone." He said that while serving as the first head of NATO.

THE NAVY IS PLEASED with the public response to the series of volumes on WWII by Prof. Samuel Eliot Morison, the distinguished sea historian who has been working on this project under Navy auspices. But there is also some disappointment. The reason: not enough Navy men are reading the books. So far, 10 volumes have been published. The Invasion of France will be out next year, followed by Leyte in 1958, the Liberation of the Philippines in 1960 and Liquidation of the Japanese Empire in 1961.

THE AIR FORCE WILL SPEND almost half a million dollars to demilitarize 26 B-36 bombers now in storage at Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz. It's expected that about 156,000 items will be salvaged for return to AF supply channels. THE FIRST B-36 to be retired left the Air Force last year; the intercontinental bombers went into service in 1948.

GROUND FORCE COMMANDERS are not completely enthusiastic over the plans of the Tactical Air Command to realign the development of its forces overseas. General Weyland, TAC Commander, has revealed that TAC is planning on keeping one squadron of a wing on six months TDY in Europe, with the other two squadrons in the United States. ARMY CHIEFS are concerned over the depleted air units that would be available immediately to support ground units, which they believe to be TAC's main task.

INCREASING CONCERN is being generated at Marine Corps Headquarters by the early marriages of lower pay-grade enlisted men. While it is the Commandant's policy "to offer no opposition to marriage and no advice which could in any way be interpreted to mean criticism thereof," Headquarters is encouraging officers and senior NCO's to make young Marines aware of the hardships which may result by tying the knot too early in life.

WIDE COVERAGE FOR U.S. OFFICERS

34 YEARS DEPENDABLE SERVICE

QUICK SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS

...and now Gentlemen,
the advantages of USAA INSURANCE

On post or base—in the field—at sea or in the air—even off duty, you will hear praise of United Services Automobile Association. Armed forces' officers in all branches, both active and retired, have long learned the value and economy of a USAA automobile insurance policy.

USAA was organized as a non-profit association in 1922 to provide the armed forces' officer with low cost automobile insurance.
The current average saving to stateside USAA policyholders amounts to 44% of the standard manual premium on automobiles.
Last year, for example, 262,161 members of USAA received over seven million dollars in dividends on their policies.

Under the direction of active and retired service officers, USAA best meets the auto insurance needs of the armed forces' officer —and for the least cost—whether it be in the United States, its possessions and territories; Canada, Cuba, the Canal Zone; Japan and certain Pacific bases; the Philippines or Western Continental Europe.

No matter whether you are stateside, or overseas, USAA is as close as your nearest mailbox, telephone or telegraph office. Your USAA insurance becomes effective as of postmarked time of application, unless a later date is specified.

Save money...insure peace of mind.
Insure with confidence today—with USAA.

Charles E. Cheever,

Colonel, USA — Retired, General Manager

BEG PARDON!

THE JOURNAL, in an effort to inform as many military families as possible of recent actions to expand our news coverage — highlighted by the announcement of the airlifting of our weekly issues to Europe — finds it impossible to check all our mailings with our list of subscribers.

As a result, we know there will be some instances in which JOURNAL readers, some of them subscribers for decades, will receive circulation material. We ask their understanding and pardon and hope that they may feel inclined to pass along information about THE JOURNAL to their friends.

Services Set To Increase Regulars

transfer officers to the Regular ranks). The legislation also increases the authorized number of permanent generals in both the Army and Air Force. In the Army, the authorized number of permanent general officers will increase from 201 to 339. In the Air Force, the increase is from 156 to 449, but Air Force officials have stated that they do not plan to exceed Officer Grade Limitation Act ceiling which permits 336 permanent generals for a total officer force of 70,000.

In the Navy and Marine Corps, officers will continue to be integrated only through the ranks of lieutenant and captain, respectively.

Existing statutory ceilings for Regular Navy and Marine Corps officers are adequate, according to the Pentagon. For the Navy, the presently authorized Regular officer strength is 58,301, which is in excess of 50 per cent of the required active-duty officer strength of 67,250. Of the officers now on active duty in the Navy, 45 per cent (or 30,390) are Regulars.

The present administrative ceiling on Marine Corps Regular officer strength is 8,550 (although there is a statutory ceiling of 28,000), and the Corps currently has 8,536 Regulars which represents 50 per cent of the planned active-duty officer strength of 17,104.

The basic objective of the legislation is to establish greater stability in the officer corps of the Army and Air Force by offering the security of a Regular commission to a greater proportion of the career officers on active duty.

The measure is expected to reduce the high turnover rate of experienced Reserve officers, induce a greater number to accept Regular commissions, eventually eliminate the "hump" problem in Regular Army and AF promotions, and provide a larger "hard corps" of Army and AF career officers.

The Augmentation bill went to the White House this week after the House accepted minor Senate amendments.

A detailed breakdown—by rank—of the Army and AF officers to be integrated under the provisions of the bill was released by the Senate Armed Services Committee last week (The Journal, 14 July).

Readers' Views On Shortage Of Doctors

The AMA and Med. Schools

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

My attention has been called to a communication on "Wants Service Medical School" in the section labeled "Readers' Views" on page 10 of the issue of Army Navy Air Force JOURNAL of July 7, 1956. There are so many inaccuracies in the contents of this communication, that I felt I should bring them to your attention.

In the first place, the statement that "About 50 years ago the American Medical Association began a policy of closing down medical schools and limiting the number of medical students under the guise of raising professional standards" is quite incorrect. The American Medical Association has never closed any medical school. Some 56 years ago, a report on Medical Education was published as a result of a study spearheaded by Dr. Abraham Flexner. This report was the result of the need for an evaluation of what at that time was an utterly chaotic situation in medical education in the United States. There were, it is true, a large number of schools in the country, but it was clearly demonstrated that only about one-third of those in existence were offering a satisfactory medical education adequate to meet the needs of that period. The remaining institutions were either diploma mills or had facilities, personnel or financing inadequate to offer a medical education suitable for that period. Institutions were classified during the period from 1910 until about 1928 as A, B, or C in terms of their overall potentialities. B and C schools either improved or closed their doors.

Throughout the entire period since 1910, the Council on Medical Education, which during the last 25 years has been known as the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association, has worked closely with the Association of American Medical Colleges in constant efforts to assist in developing and maintaining sound standards of medical education in the United States in the interests of the American public which the graduates of our medical schools must serve.

Through the medium of establishing sound basic essentials of medical education, consultations, advice, survey evaluation and annual listing of the approved medical schools by the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals and through membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, these two organizations have exerted great influence in medical education in the United States. They have cooperated in stimulating and encouraging new medical schools and assisting in the improvement of those in existence where such assistance was indicated. They have discouraged only the schools that did not have the facilities, finances, or faculty potentials with promise of reasonably sound educational experiences for medical students. Their objectives have been straightforward, sincere, and directed toward the development of physicians well qualified in the diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of human ailments in keeping with progressive scientific knowledge. Since 1928, the earlier classification of schools as A, B and C was discontinued, and medical schools have been either approved or not approved.

Contrary to a common misconception, and this is obviously present in the mind of the Captain who wrote his letter to the Editor, these two organizations have not endeavored to control the number of physicians graduated by schools or the number of students admitted by them. They have advised against medical schools undertaking to admit more students than their faculties or facilities could possibly justify if they were to be properly educated.

Your correspondent is also sadly misinformed in regard to the relation between medical school applicants, number of applications made to medical schools for admission and actual number of students admitted. During the past two years, approximately one out of every 1.96 applicants for admission to a medical school in the United States has been granted admission to the first year class. It should be pointed out that each applicant usually files an application with anywhere from two to four or five medical schools. This means that the number of applications filed represents many times the number of actual individuals applying. Several years ago, publicity was given to the number of applications filed rather than to the total number of applicants filing them. This led to a good deal of publicity to the effect that only one out of anywhere from 10 to 20 applicants to medical schools were eventually admitted. This can be illustrated by the fact that in 1953-1954, 48,556 applications were made for admission to medical school by a total of 14,678 applicants. It will be noted, therefore, that each of these applicants filed an average number of 3.3 applications for admission to medical schools at that time. Seven thousand four hundred forty-nine out of the total of 14,678 or one to 1.97 of the actual applicants were admitted to medical school that year.

Even at the peak of pressure for admission to medical school observed in 1948-49 when large numbers of young men were being released from the military services, the ratio of applicants to admissions was never higher than one admission to 3.6 applicants.

Another fallacy which should be pointed out is that the AMA does not establish the policies of the State Boards of Medical Examiners. The State Boards of Medical Examiners are independent agencies and the licensing in each state is done on the basis of the individual medical practice acts of the states concerned and the actions of the various individual licensing bodies.

Your correspondent is also apparently unaware of the great increase in enrollment in medical schools during recent years or of the fact that there has been a marked increase in the number of new medical schools during recent years. For instance, in 1930, there were 76 approved medical schools in the United States enrolling 21,597 students and graduating 4,565 physicians. In 1955, there were 81 approved schools of medicine in the United States enrolling a total of 28,583 medical students and graduating 6,977 young physicians. For factual information in regard to this data, I wish to refer your correspondent to an article on "The Facts About Medical Students" in the March 12, 1955 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, pages 903-906, and to the last report on "Medical Education in the United States and Canada" from the October 8, 1955 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association. Table 1 on pages 566-567 will give the enrollment figures in medical schools this past year. Table 3 on page 569 will give comparative enrollments from 1910 through 1955. Table 4 on page 570 will indicate some of the newly developing medical school programs that are now under way.

In passing, I would like to point out that the solution of the problem of personnel for the medical branches of the armed services is not as simple as the establishment of one or more service medical schools. The increased enrollment of medical schools during recent years has outweighed the advantage of establishing several new medical schools. One of the problems would seem to be in retaining career medical personnel in the services in more adequate numbers.

EDWARD L. TURNER, M. D.,
Secretary to the Council on Medical Education and Hospitals, American Medical Association.

A Service Medical College

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I read with interest the letter in your 7 July issue headed "Wants Service Medical School," signed "Captain." In his letter "Captain" states that none of the articles or letters, published in your paper, had made mention of the basic cause of the problem, that is, "that there are simply not enough doctors."

Several weeks ago I wrote a letter to the Editor of THE JOURNAL, which you were kind enough to publish, concerning the shortage of medical officers in the Services and doctors in civil life. In that letter I stated that the basic cause of this shortage was the insufficient number of doctors caused by the insufficient number of medical students. The cause for this shortage was placed squarely on the American Medical Association, as "Captain" does in his letter.

I pointed out the crying need for a Service Medical College which could educate medical officers for all the Armed Services including the Public Health Service. It was pointed out how such a College could be organized and conducted in an effective and efficient manner.

I concur fully with "Captain" and am still of the opinion that such action is the solution to our difficulties.

RETIRED.

Shortly after his retirement he was recalled to active duty and served until 1944.

Colonel McBride, an enthusiastic and industrious inventor, held several military patents, and his small machine shop was an integral part of the McBride household and was moved with each change of station. He was one of the earliest to build a rifle-barreled mortar, in 1920, and this item was later accepted for further test and development at Edgewood Arsenal. The grooved barrel became one of the key characteristics of the now-famous 4.2 mortar, which he helped develop. It won great distinction in WWII and is now a standard Army weapon. Colonel McBride also invented a new method for filling and sealing liquids in shells for this mortar, a technique still in use today.

He is survived by his widow and six children. One of his daughters, Mrs. Frank L. Miller, resides in Washington, D. C. Other daughters are Mrs. James C. Gerhard, of Bel Air, Md.; Lt. Marian P. McBride, USAF, in California; and Mrs. Daniel Wickham, of California. One of his sons, Lewis W. McBride, is serving with the Corps of Engineers, in Greece, and another son, Paul L. McBride, resides in California.

National Cemetery. Chaplain (Colonel) Charles E. Brown officiated.

Honorary pallbearers were Maj. Gen. K. L. Hastings, The Quartermaster General; Maj. Gen. Alfred B. Denniston, The Deputy Quartermaster General; Brig. Gen. Hugh Mackintosh, Assistant Quartermaster General for Administration and Services; Col. A. T. McGuckian, Chief, Food Services Division, OQMG; Col. Walter P. Scoggins, Assistant Chief, Memorial Division, OQMG; Col. David Alexander, QMC; Lt. Col. J. W. Gerard, QMC; Col. Charles A. Hoss, QMC, (ret.); and Lt. Col. Edward Mazaitis, of the Schemmady, N. Y., General Depot.

Colonel Wall left Washington on Friday, 13 July, for McGuire Field, N. J., where he boarded a Military Air Transport Services plane for Burtonwood, England. Colonel Wall's mission to Europe, as the personal representative of The Quartermaster General, was to assist in the dedications of six World War II cemeteries, as the guest of the American Battle Monuments Commission. The cemeteries are located in England, France and Italy. Colonel Wall was also scheduled for important meetings with the European Command on business of the Memorial Division.

Colonel Wall, who resided at 10200 Ridgemoor Drive, Silver Spring, Md., leaves his widow, the former Jessie Stewart, of Middlebourne, W. Va.; a son, Fritz, who is employed in the Petroleum Division, Office of The Quartermaster General, and a daughter, Ann, a pre-medical student at the University of Florida, and temporarily a laboratory technician at Walter Reed Army General Hospital.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

AMF Pushes "CAD" R & D Program

The Mechanics Research Department of the American Machine & Foundry Company is engaged in research and development programs for "cartridge-actuated devices" used on several of the modern fighter and bomber aircraft. This AMF Chicago facility, with its own Ballistic Test Station at Colorado Springs, has made a number of contributions to the various ejection devices used on various aircraft.

The items are listed under the following headings:

1. Catapults for ejecting personnel from aircraft.
2. Canopy removers which jettison the aircraft canopy.
3. Initiators which serve as a kind of pneumatic switch for operating other CAD items.
4. Thrusters which are used to position the pilot's seat just prior to ejection, stowing column controls, and unlocking the canopy.

These devices have gained widespread application for the following reasons: a. Performance is reliable and reproducible. b. The energy is readily available. c. Little maintenance is required. d. Cost is low. e. Component design is simple. f. The power plant is contained in a relatively small package. g. Performance is relatively temperature insensitive, and h. No significant deterioration occurs during long periods of storage.

In the early stages of the CAD development program, attention was centered on installations for fighter aircraft only. Later the field of application was enlarged to include bomber aircraft. This naturally increased system complexity because of the requirement for multiple operation such as: (a) escape of several crew members instead of just one, (b) system initiation from several points or by any of several crew members, (c) positioning of the several crew members prior to an emergency abandonment, and (d) stowage of control column, bomb sight and other equipment away from the ejection path.

This compounding of operations pointed out the need for automatic sequential functioning of system components and made it necessary only to start the process. Once the system is actuated, there would be a continuous "get ready" process up to seat ejection.

In a simple escape system an initiator, which may be located on the arm rest of the pilot's seat, is triggered manually. Gas generated in the device passes through a length of tube to operate the firing mechanism of a canopy remover. By operation of a second initiator, connected in a similar manner to a catapult, the pilot-seat is ejected from the disabled aircraft. Concurrently, a delay initiator is triggered two seconds later. This actuates the pilot's lap belt release to permit him to fall free of the seat and descend by parachute. Other devices, such as thrusters, are used in more complex systems where it is mandatory to position the pilot seat with respect to the escape hatch, stow the control column, bomb sight, or other equipment prior to the ejection cycle.

New Contracts Awarded For Turbine 'Copter

Two new contracts totaling $1,296,839.38 have been awarded Bell Aircraft Corporation's helicopter division at Ft. Worth, Tex., for additional test programs in connection with the development of the Army XH-40 helicopter.

Vice President Harvey Gaylord said the contracts indicate the increasing confidence the military is placing in the turbine-powered helicopter.

Awarded by the Air Force for the Army, the contracts authorize Bell's helicopter division to begin new test programs directed toward the rapid development of the XH-40 production configuration. Three flight test helicopters are being assembled at the Bell plant there.

The additional funds boost the total amount of contracts received in the past seven weeks for the new frontline helicopter to nearly $4 million. Mr. Gaylord said that the Army plans to use the Bell XH-40 in sizable numbers, providing deliveries are made on schedule and that the test models match design performances.

Army Pilot Training

Requests for proposals will be released to prospective contractors by Air Materiel Command at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, beginning this week, for the operation of the Army's pilot training school at Edward Gary AFB, San Marcos, Tex.

This is the first step in changing the fixed-wing primary pilot training school at San Marcos from a military operation to a contract-operated school.

Harvey Finances New 54,000-ton Plant

Harvey Aluminum of Torrance, Calif., has announced that all financial and contractual arrangements have been finalized for construction of the company's 54,000 ton aluminum reduction plant at The Dalles, Oregon.

Work at the 500 acre site at The Dalles, interrupted four years ago, will resume about 1 Aug. The plant is scheduled for completion late in 1957. The announcement confirmed earlier reports that Harvey Machine Co., Inc., of which Harvey Aluminum is a division, has borrowed $44 million for the project from the Bank of America, Chase Manhattan Bank, and First National City Bank of New York.

The loan includes provisions for additional working capital of up to $10 million, and after completion of the reduction plant for additional capital funds under certain terms and conditions for up to $25 million. The term of the loan is 10 years.

Mr. Lawrence A. Harvey, executive vice-president of Harvey Machine Co., Inc., stated: "We are constructing this plant entirely with private funds. The banks involved are the three largest banking institutions in the United States. They have demonstrated complete confidence in us and in the future of an expanding aluminum industry."

ADMIRAL ARNOLD NAMED CHAIRMAN

Mr. Leon Ackerman, developer of Indian Lakes Estates, Fla., has announced appointment by the Club Committee of RADM James E. "Bennie" Arnold, U.S.N.-Ret., as Chairman of the Board of the Indian Lake Club.

Admiral Arnold's duties will be that of coordinating the various branches and activities of the club, the layout of the golf course and other complete recreational facilities that will come under the jurisdiction of the Indian Lake Club. This club, for property owners, is part of the multi-million dollar country club development near Lake Wales, Fla.

Admiral Arnold's varied naval assignments include service at Utah Beach during the assault on Normandy Beach, France on D-Day, 6 June 1944. He was Commanding Officer of the U. S. Naval Base at Le Havre, France 1944-45, and president of the General Courts Martial, First Naval District, during 1945.

Formerly, Admiral Arnold was organizer, builder and owner of the Wildwood Country Club (now known as the Sherwood-at-Natick Country Club) in Natick, Mass., for over 20 years. He has also had other varied business experience.

Admiral Arnold and his wife are now residents of Chevy Chase, Md.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

THE Board of Visitors to the U. S. Coast Guard Academy has recommended a $2.7 million construction program, including an extension of the present cadet barracks to house the entire cadet corps.

The Board said cadets at the Academy "are now crowded three in a room and it is necessary to use a three-story WWII temporary barracks to accommodate the overflow." The group urged construction of a new $1 million extension on the dormitory to house the expanded cadet corps.

Construction also was recommended by the board of a $900,000 modern fireproof barracks to house 200 men of the Officer Candidate and Merchant Marine Indoctrination Schools; construction of a new $350,000 cadet mess hall; and construction of a $450,000 combined administration classroom building for the Officer Candidate and Merchant Marine Indoctrination Schools.

The Board commended the USCG Academy Superintendent, RADM. R. J. Mauermaier, USCG, and his staff "for their untiring efforts in maintaining the high standards in evidence at this outstanding institution."

Cadet Procurement

A final report on the 1956 Cadet Procurement Program shows a slight increase in the number of young men making application for the examination and a large increase in those accepting appointments. In 1955, out of 1629 applications, 230 young men reported to the Academy and were sworn in as members of the Class of 1959. This year, out of 1690 applications, 253 reported to the Academy and were sworn in as members of the Class of 1960.

Of the 253 sworn in as members of the Class of 1960, 10 are Coast Guard enlisted men, 1 is a Navy enlisted man and 1 is an Army enlisted man. In the class are also 9 young men who are sons of Coast Guard personnel on active duty or retired.

President Tells Overseas Family Housing Details; Senator Gives Stateside Picture

The military family housing picture—both domestic and foreign—was sketched in detail at the Capital this week by President Eisenhower and Senator Homer Capehart (R-Ind.).

The President, in a communique on the Mutual Security Program, told how the Services are utilizing foreign currency to build military family housing overseas.

The Senator—architect of the military housing program in the States—gave an up-to-the-minute report on the number of Capehart homes now under construction, approved for construction or in the process of being negotiated.

President Eisenhower said the Services currently are using about $85.1 million in foreign currency for the construction of more than 6000 family housing units in Morocco, Greece, Libya, Japan, Italy, Spain and the United Kingdom.

Here is the summary of planned uses of foreign currencies for military family housing as outlined by the President:

Morocco—The Air Force is using the equivalent of $6.4 million in Austrian schillings to purchase about 577 prefabricated units to be erected at four different locations in Morocco.

Japan—Approximately $25 million in Japanese yen is earmarked for military family housing. The Army plans to construct a total of 1700 units for the three Services in Japan: 898 for the USAF at nine different locations; 297 for the Navy and 505 for the Army.

Mediterranean—Approximately $7 million worth of prefabs will be purchased in Finland for construction of military family housing in countries of the Mediterranean area, including Greece and Libya.

Italy—The equivalent of $2.7 million in Italian lire is being allocated for the construction of 219 units in Italy, including 30 for the Air Force and 189 for the Army.

Spain—$16 million will be used to construct 687 units in Spain: 495 for the Air Force and 192 for the Navy. The program has been delayed due to non-availability in Spain of certain plumbing, heating and electrical items. The U.S. Government has allocated $190,000 for architectural development and site engineering costs.

United Kingdom—$15.2 million has been obligated and housing contracts have been awarded for construction of 1,481 units for the USAF and 16 for the Navy.

Authority to more than double this program recently was granted in the Military Public Works bill.

THE STATESIDE PICTURE was told by Senator Capehart. He said contracts already have been let or are in the process of being let for the construction of 71,320 family housing units at bases throughout the U.S. and in Hawaii.

He gave the Senate a report prepared by Mr. Bruce C. Kixmiller, Jr., FHA Special Assistant for Armed Services Housing.

As of 10 June, Mr. Kixmiller said, the Defense Department had 151 family housing projects in various stages of development, ranging from preliminary planning and engineering to actual construction.

He said construction is progressing according to schedule on 1,000 new units at Abilene AFB, and the first of the group are programmed for occupancy in October.

During May, projects were successfully bid for 280 units at Ft. Bragg, N. C., and 500 units at Eglin AFB, and construction was started in June.

THE FHA OFFICIAL said bids for 211 units at Ft. Carson, Colo., exceeded the FHA estimate of replacement cost, but he understands the Army plans to rebid the units this month as part of a 500-unit project.

Bids, he said, were due to be opened this month on the following Army and Air Force projects:

Ft. Rucker	120
Redstone Arsenal	270
Two Rock Ranch Sta.	33
Ft. Ord	189
Ft. Benning	1,000

General Lanahan Elected

Maj. Gen. Francis H. Lanahan, U.S.A.-Ret., has been elected executive vice president of Federal Electric Corporation of Lodi, N. J., according to an announcement today by Edmond H. Leavey, president of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. Federal Electric is the field service and maintenance subsidiary of IT&T.

General Lanahan became associated with Federal Electric Corporation after his retirement from the Army Signal Corps in 1955. Since he joined it the company has entered its period of greatest growth, having been awarded contracts by the Air Force for the maintenance and operation of the DEW Line, distant-early-warning radar network guarding the northern approaches to the North American continent, and for similar responsibilities in connection with the WHITE ALICE communications network in Alaska. The latter currently is under construction to improve older facilities and add new radio links in some of the more remote areas of that territory.

THIRD DSM FOR GENERAL HARMON

Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles will present the Distinguished Service Medal to Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, USAF-Ret., first Superintendent of the U. S. Air Force Academy, at a change of command ceremony at Lowry AFB, Colo., on Friday, 27 July.

The award, for distinguished service in supervising establishment of the Academy and its operations to date, will be the third occasion on which General Harmon, USMA '15, has received the Distinguished Service Medal.

During the ceremony, General Harmon will turn over command of the Academy to Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, his successor as Superintendent. Both the newly arrived Class of 1960 and a portion of the Class of 1959 will march in a parade and pass in review. Part of the Class of '59 will be away either on home leave or receiving instruction in light plane piloting.

Pay Raise Inquiry Moves To Field

formulating recommendations for Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and the President.

General LeMay and General Partridge reportedly developed at length with the committee information concerning the critical shortages of skilled manpower in their respective commands. A good part of this data was recently brought to light in power-packed testimony before the Symington Air Power Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The C-in-C's of SAC and CONAD asserted that revised pay scales are essential to reduce the heavy personnel turnover.

During its field trip this week, the Cordier Committee concentrated on the job of obtaining specific information "about how our national defense efforts are being hampered by the shortage of highly skilled personnel," the Pentagon said.

Although the group was organized and identified as concerned primarily with pay matters, it will examine, at Mr. Wilson's request, all aspects of the procurement and retention problem.

This means that the Committee will survey such factors as assignment policies, school opportunities and promotion prospects. It is anticipated that one recommendation will be that the Services do everything possible to stabilize assignments in order to prevent frequent family movements.

Chairman Cordier gave new evidence this week that he intends to direct a far-sweeping investigation. He said the Committee "intends to conduct a searching review of all aspects of military life and Defense Department operations."

After this week's trip, the Committee will visit a number of other Service installations, certainly including representative facilities of the Navy and Marine Corps.

Joining Chairman Cordier for the conferences with Generals LeMay, Partridge and Watlington were Mr. Clarence H. Linder, an assistant to Mr. Cordier, Vice Chairman Carter L. Burgess, who is Assistant Defense Secretary in charge of manpower, and Mr. Charles R. Hook, Chairman of the Board, ARMCO Steel Corporation, who directed the comprehensive pay study in 1948 which led to the Career Compensation Act.

Also in the party were Cordier Committee members David S. Smith, Assistant Air Force Secretary; Hugh M. Milton, Assistant Army Secretary; Admiral William M. Fechteler, USN, senior-ranking military member; Lt. Gen. Richard E. Nugent, USAF-Ret., former Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel; and Brig. Gen. Charles H. Hayes, Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, USA-Ret., a former Army G-1, is also a member of the Committee as is former Assistant Defense Secretary John A. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, and former Assistant Air Force Secretary H. Lee White.

Maj. Gen. C. Rodney Smith, USA, Brig. Gen. Harold R. Maddux, USAF, Staff Director, and Lt. Col. Allen W. Stephens, USAF, Staff Assistant, also accompanied the Committee to Nebraska and Colorado.

HOW TO GIVE NOISE THE SILENT TREATMENT

SITUATION: A submarine surfaced somewhere in iceberg country, attempting to establish communications with distant base.

PROBLEM: Interference, or "noise," critically garbles message reception. Radio operator cannot hear message above interference.

SOLUTION: Operator switches on Hoffman Incremental Interference Suppressor, an exclusive feature of Hoffman Communications Receivers. Atmospheric noise is silenced—vital message comes through loud and clear.

This significant achievement in the science of communications has undergone extensive field tests under rugged service conditions. Tests demonstrate that in CW, FSK and AM communications, Hoffman-developed noise limiting techniques can give 100% message recovery from a signal containing atmospheric static 80 decibels greater than the carrier. Interference caused by static, corona discharge, lightning and most man-made noise is reduced to a minimum. Result: clear, reliable radio-communications under extremely adverse operating conditions. The imaginative engineering teamwork and skill that pioneered in the reduction of noise in radio communications is ready to tackle your communications problems too—from basic research through final production.

Hoffman Laboratories is engaged in these many other associated fields of electronics:

Airborne Radar and Navigational Equipment... Missile Guidance and Control Systems... Electronic Countermeasures... Advanced Communications Techniques in the VLF, HF, VHF and UHF regions... High Speed Search and Electronically Tuned Receivers.

This creates a constant need for engineers and physicists of highest calibre. Professional stature in mechanical engineering, electrical or electronics engineering or physics is required.
